The Japan Studies Program at LaGuardia Community College is pleased to host a film screening of Hafu: The Mixed-Race Experience in Japan along with discussion with Megumi Nishikura, the director of this documentary film. This event would explore how people with multiple cultural, national, and familial ties understand who they are and where they belong. Through HAFU, Megumi Nishikura brings these questions to life through the personal stories of mixed-race individuals in Japan who navigate the experience of being seen as culturally or ethnically mixed. Megumi's broader filmmaking and current project on the dual citizenship extend this exploration from cultural identity to the legal and political structures that determine who is recognized as a citizen. See <https://www.nippon.com/en/people/e00052/> for the review of HAFU and Megumi Nishikura's bio.
